Abstract. To clarify regional distribution of Silene in Nepal the horizontal distribution of 21 species of this genus is presented with maps.

Key words : Silene, distribution, Nepal.

Introduction

The genus Silene L. (Caryophyllaceae), with about 700 species is distributed mainly in the northern temperate regions of the world (Mabberley, 1997). It is much diversified in the Himalayas and adjacent regions in China (Yunnan, Sichuan and Tibet). It has much variation in flower structure, especially shape and hairiness of calyx and petal parts such as claw and limb. The genus Silene of Nepal has been studied by Don (1825), Edgeworth and Hooker (1875), Bocquet (1967, 1969) and Bocquet and Chater (1979) and is now represented by 26 species. Although its taxonomy has been well worked out but its regional distributional pattern has not yet been studied. The regional distribution maps of plant groups allow study of distribution barriers at the population level (Noshiro, 1997). In this regard several reports have already been published on various plant genera of Nepal (Noshiro, 1997 ; Amano & Ohba 1998 ; Akiyama et al. 1999 ; Ikeda & Koba, 2000 ; Miyamoto & Koba, 2001 ; Ohba et al. 2003 ; Mouri et al., 2004 ; Amano & Noshiro, 2004, 2005). To clarify regional distribution of Silene in Nepal, we present here horizontal distribution maps of 21 species (Table 1, Figs. 1-21). The present report is an addition to the already published reports. The distribution maps are based on the specimens deposited in the Royal Botanic Garden Edinburgh, Edinburgh, Scotland, U.K. (E), Conservatoire et Jardin Botaniques, Geneva, Switzerland (G), Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, London, U.K. (K), University of Kyoto, Kyoto, Japan (KYO), Institute of Botany, Chinese Academy of Sciences, Xiangshan, Beijing, China (PE), University Museum, University of Tokyo, Japan (TI), Botanical Gardens, Tohoku University, Sendai, Japan (TUS) and Smithsonian Institution, National Museum of Natural History, Washington, DC., U.S.A. (US). The list of the specimens used for the present study is presented in the Appendix 1. It contains some specimens listed in the Flora of Nepal database made by the Society of Himalayan Botany and is available on the University of Tokyo Herbarium page of the World Wide Web (<http://ti.um.u-tokyo.ac.jp>). To show horizontal distribution of Silene in Nepal we have followed Hara et al. (1978) for phytogeographical divisions of Nepal, such as west Nepal (western border to 83°E), central Nepal (83°E to 86°30'E) and east Nepal (86°30'E to eastern border).

Recently, Yoshida (2006) has analyzed the horizontal distribution of Himalayan plants given in his book 'Himalayan Plants Illustrated' (Yoshida, 2005), and classified them into 24 distribution categories in five distribution types. This classification is useful to understand the horizontal distribution pattern of the Himalayan plants. According to this classification the distribution pattern of the Nepalese Silene shows the following six categories.

Ba. Plants of the temperate zone of western Eurasia, including at least a part of the Himalaya : Silene baccifera, Silene conoidea, Silene vulgaris.

Cb. Plants of the western and the central Himalaya, including Kashmir in the west and with the eastern end of their distribution lying between Garhwal and central Nepal : Silene edgeworthii, Silene falconeriana, Silene kumaonensis, Silene laxantha, Silene moorcroftiana.

Cc. Plants distributed nearly throughout the Himalaya, including Kashmir in the west and with the eastern end of their distribution lying between eastern Nepal and Myanmar : Silene himalayensis, Silene indica, Silene nepalensis.

Cd. Plants endemic to the central Himalaya from Himachal Pradesh to central Nepal : Silene davidlongii, Silene greywilsonii, Silene helleboriflora, Silene hideakiohbae, Silene vautierae.

Ce. Plants of the central and the eastern Himalaya with the western end of their distribution lying between Himachal Pradesh and central Nepal and the eastern end between eastern Nepal and Myanmar : Silene caespitella, Silene holosteifolia, Silene stracheyi.

Cf. Plants endemic to the eastern Himalaya from eastern Nepal to Myanmar, excluding plants in the next category (Cg) endemic to southeastern Tibet : Silene khasiana, Silene nigrescens.

Distribution of Silene in Nepal

Among the 21 species of Silene presented in this paper, four species (Silene himalayensis, Silene indica, Silene kumaonensis and Silene nepalensis) grow throughout Nepal. Five species (Silene baccifera, Silene greywilsonii, Silene helleboriflora, Silene hideakiohbae and Silene holosteifolia) grow only in central Nepal. Seven species (Silene conoidea, Silene davidlongii, Silene edgeworthii, Silene falconeriana, Silene laxantha, Silene stracheyi and Silene vulgaris) grow only in west Nepal. Two species (Silene khasiana and Silene nigrescens) grow in east and central Nepal. Three species (Silene caespitella, Silene moorcroftiana and Silene vautierae) grow in central and west Nepal. Among the 21 species of Silene five species are endemic to Nepal of which one species (Silene davidlongii) grows in west Nepal and one (Silene vautierae) grows in west and central Nepal while three species (Silene greywilsonii, S. helleboriflora and S. hideakiohbae) grow only in central Nepal.

The genus Silene is more diversified in the alpine zone of Nepal and most of the species of Silene are found in the high altitude in Nepal. Only a few species have been recorded from the lower altitude. They have not been recorded from the tropical zone of Nepal. In Nepal they are found from the subtropical or temperate zone to subalpine or alpine zone. In the alpine zone above 3,800 m 11 species of Silene are found including two species (Silene indica and Silene kumaonensis) occurring up to 4,500 m and nine species (Silene davidlongii, Silene greywilsonii, Silene helleboriflora, Silene himalayensis, Silene indica, Silene moorcroftiana, Silene nepalensis, Silene nigrescens and Silene vautierae) occurring beyond 4,500 m. Among them Silene indica has a wide range of altitudinal distribution ranging from 1,500 m to 4,500 m and also shows wide range of variations in habit, leaf and flower structures. Some species of Silene, such as Silene baccifera, Silene conoidea, Silene edgeworthii, Silene falconeriana, Silene hideakiohbae and Silene vulgaris are found in the subtropical and temperate zones only and do not extend to the subalpine or alpine zone. The two species found in the subalpine zone only of west Nepal at 3,000–3,800 m are Silene laxantha and Silene stracheyi, while one species, Silene khasiana, is found from the subtropical to subalpine zone of central and east Nepal at 1,800–3,200 m.

The horizontal distribution of Silene in Nepal shows that the number of species found in west Nepal is more than that found in east Nepal. In west Nepal 14 species of Silene are found including seven species distributed in west Nepal only, whereas from east Nepal only six species are reported (Table 1). Moreover, if we see the distribution of Silene in west Nepal and the arid zone of Nepal, such as Dolpo, Mustang and Manang areas, then the number of Silene species occurring in these areas would be 19 out of 21. Only two species, Silene khasiana and Silene nigrescens, do not occur there. This indicates that Silene more commonly occurs in drier condition than in moister condition as the climate in Nepal becomes drier from east to west (Amano & Noshiro, 2004). This is in contrast to the nature of genera Juncus, Pedicularis or Rhododendron studied before, which prefer moister condition and the number of species of these genera is more in east Nepal than in west (Amano & Noshiro 2004, 2005 ; Miyamoto & Koba, 2001 ; Noshiro, 1997).
